What do our members say?

Paula, a GradGuard member, recently shared her story when her daughter withdrew from Texas Tech University due to serious anxiety.

"The small portion you put in is really worth the investment because you don't know what's going to happen and having a way to protect the financial requirement for the privilege of going to college, that just might be a good idea. A month and a half into it, she and her roommate began having some conflict. It became too much. My heart was broken for her. Several weeks later, we did get a check and it was over $11,000. Today, my daughter is able to resume what any 20 year old should be able to do. It's a no brainer to have that safety net."
